

First RV Trip - Fall 2018

Day 9

Thursday

October 4th

Holloway, LA

To

Columbus
Texas

Weather

90's
Sunny
Humid

Hello to Family & Friends

Today was mostly travel. Only sight to be seen was this Good Year blimp on my way into Houston.

I ended up spending the night in Columbus, TX, but that was via Morgan's apartment in Houston. I stopped by to drop off the beer she ordered from Wisconsin, do my laundry, watch the Brewers win, and some miscellaneous computer things. Then drove for an hour or so to Columbus.

Tomorrow is a definite travel day as I head to Midland, Texas to pick up Morgan from the International Spaceport there. LOL. It is actually named the Midland International Air and Space Port. It seems that in 2014 the FAA issued a commercial spaceport license to Midland, marking the first time an airport with regular passenger air service has also been cleared to host spaceships.

From there we will stop in Fort Stockton to resupply our food and water, then hit Marathon where we will resupply the RV with diesel, then on to the Stillwell General Store and Campground where we will resupply our bodies with sleep. Stillwell is about 8 miles from the entrance to Big Bend. So, no photos tomorrow either. But, after that, we start our adventure in Big Bend National Park.

Goodnight!